Julia Yields to the Inevitable

READ THIS FIRST

If you had been jilted by a man and he came to you later and told you that after all you were the only woman he had ever loved, would you take him back? Julia Grant had this problem to face, and she faced it bravely and did what she thought was best. But after she had promised a second time to marry Dan Carson, she discovered something else. She discovered that her work in the hospital had changed her, and the big blow came when she discovered that unconsciously she had given her love to another man, Dr. John Norville, head surgeon. It is this fact that caused her to leave the hospital and come home, resolved to marry Dan immediately.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

ANY girl whose mother has spent an entire morning buying her pretty lingerie for a trousseau should be happy, and Julia was anything but that. She tried to force herself to a certain response, but she felt dead, incapable of any enthusiasm, and she dreaded that night when they would be alone. That night she would give up her last vestige of independence, she would tell Dan that she was ready to marry him whenever he was ready. Lucy greeted Mrs. Grant and Julia at lunch with the news that she had telephoned Dan and that he was coming for dinner. "I thought it would be a good idea, Julia; aren't you glad?" "Yes, indeed," Julia returned quickly. "It's a splendid idea."

Adventures With a Purse

I ALWAYS think that if there is one person in the world who ought to be humored, it is the convalescent. It's so hard to have to lie in bed when one is beginning to feel like one has to get up, with utter indifference, the flowers in the wall paper, or something equally boring. It is the convalescent, then, who, I claim, should be humored. Instead of the customary little water bottle of glass with the tiny tumbler fitting over the top, how much nicer it would be to have on the table by the bedside a glass bottle and tumbler which is decorated with tiny, brightly colored flowers against a striking background of black. One shan't have these sets for less than $1.85. They would make a very nice gift.

Although it is not always a fact that a fondness for one subject or another is shown when one is very young, yet it frequently is true. And naturally any such manifestation should be encouraged. I am sure that if you have a child, even a small person who would sit for hours, absorbed, and carefully pick up hairs or invisible hairs from the thick carpet, which I frequently concealed them. But certainly, if your little girl loves to make doll's clothes, she should be encouraged. Who knows, some day she may show remarkable skill in making her own—and maybe yours. There is a most fascinating package which comes for little girls who love to sew. It contains material for a doll's dress, the pattern for cutting it out and making it, and the embroidery silk for working the tiny design stamped on the front. The price is ten cents.

As I've been known to observe before, it is the woman who really loves her home, who will be interested in the little extras. As for instance, those tin candy boxes attractively covered with cretonne. And not only do they look well on the tea table or living room table—they incidentally keep candy fresh and nice. They come at all prices, of course, but the most reasonable I have yet seen can be had for eighty-five cents and $1.25. How would you like to add one of these to your Christmas list?

Did you know that you can buy for twenty-five cents a sanitary spoon for your condensed milk cans? You know they are unpleasant if they become when the milk dries on the outside. But you force one of these into the top and after you have poured out the milk you need, a little flap falls over the opening which keeps it covered and sanitary. I think this is a very good idea, don't you?

we have found nothing suitable and would greatly appreciate whatever you may suggest. At the time we telephoned you, you suggested "San Souel," but this has already been used by a club of girls we know. There are nine girls and some one has suggested using the first initial of our first names, but we cannot make anything out of them, maybe you can for you seem to be able to do most anything. The names are Mary, Grace, Anna, Isabel, Lillian, Emily, Margaret, Elizabeth and Sadie. We are all old friends and the idea of the club is to keep us together during the years to come. We are all around twenty-one and meet at a different girl's home every Thursday evening. We intend to give a dance to see if we can make enough money to get a bungalow for next summer. You can see that we want to get a name that will interest people and at the same time mean something to each member. We would appreciate any suggestions that you can give us on rules and regulations for a club, for we know nothing whatever about one. I want to take this opportunity to thank you for the interesting article written by you and your letters in your column. They seem so real and I always read the woman's page the first thing every evening. E. S.

Since your club is for old friends, why not call it "Auld Lang Syne Club"? How about "The Nineties," "Karefree Klub" or "Thursday Night Club"? Your first initials are rather hard to make into a word, aren't they?

If you go to the Public Library, Thirteenth and Locust streets, you can find a book in the reference room which will tell you about rules and regulations for clubs in general. You will have to make your own special ones, of course, for your own special club, and I imagine that your meetings would be rather informal. I am very glad you enjoy the woman's page, and I hope you will continue reading it the first thing.
